Obstacles to the Presentation and Acceptance of Anthropological Data. In vivo spectroscopy shows subclinical cerebral involvement in patients with amyotrophic lateral sclerosis. Spectroscopy may detect changes in cerebral neurochemistry associated with sporadic amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (sALS) and can detect such changes before changes become evident in magnetic resonance imaging. We used magnetic resonance spectroscopy (MRS) and proton spectroscopy (^1H MRS) to measure regional cerebral concentrations of N-acetylaspartate (NAA), choline (Cho), creatine (Cr), and lactate (Lac) in 9 patients with sALS and 10 control subjects. These data were acquired using the combination of conventional (1)H MRS and advanced neuroimaging technologies of localized proton magnetic resonance spectroscopic imaging ((1)H MRSI) and single-shot echo-planar imaging ((1)H SSEPI). In vivo spectroscopy studies were performed using a 3-T magnetic resonance system. NAA/Cr and NAA/Cho ratios were significantly reduced in sALS patients compared with control subjects. There was no significant difference between NAA/Lac ratios in sALS and control subjects. Regional spectra were obtained from the motor and extra-motor areas of the brain, and (1)H MRSI parameters, the fractional anisotropy (FA), the apparent diffusion coefficient

Can someone explain why i can't view my computer drive? I have it on 3 different computers and cannot access it. A: This is a dialog box. Basically, you have an "export" folder for each of the programs you export. So, you probably have a folder for only this icon, for example. Find the folder and the file or folder, and inside there is a.reg file. That is where you should look next. It may also be the same folder that you used to install the program. And here is the question that I answered, which is your problem: How do I get to the.reg file for a program? UPDATE: My guess would be that you used "Run" to open the program. The Run box, in fact, normally always is located near the Start menu and also near the window border (on the side and top). When you do it, it creates a new folder on your computer. You can use the "Go" box to see that folder. The folder that you use to open the program will be
