How to download a song from YouTube Hi there, how could i download a specific song from youtube and download it from my cell phone? A: Do Not Try! Say no, to the "Hundreds of ways to download youtube videos". Instead, I recommend you to do the following: Download Google Keep on your phone. When you click on the youtube video, it will be saved to your google keep. That's it. Of course, there are many apps like this, but the Google keep method is the best I've seen. A: I had this exact same problem a few days ago, and I use these 3 methods: 1. Open your YouTube website from your mobile browser (in your Android phone, for example) 2. Right click on the YouTube video you want to download and select "Save video as" or "Save audio as" 3. Pick one of these: - Easiest way, tap the share button and select a file location of your choice. - Easy way to download MP3 audio file, download the MP3 format audio and just save it to your computer. - If your mobile device supports it, try changing the video quality to HD (720p/1080p). This will reduce the download time. If none of the above works, you can also use a third-party downloader app like this one: A: Open your browser on your mobile phone. Select the video link you want to watch from, and click on it. Go to your mobile browser's download section, if it is available.

Now, you can download the video from there. [Note: A previous version of this article placed a photograph of a rotary bloomer on the dashboard of a Rialto-produced 1968 car. In fact, the photo shows a rotary engine block in a part house at Ford's St. Thomas factory, located in Ontario. This oversight has been corrected.] A second-hand lens and a clue to Ford's future: that was the gist of a Monday August 4 talk at the Rialto. (meteorologist) William Bruce Stevenson (born 1963, New Mexico) is a retired weather forecaster, author and presenter. His career has included 25 years at the National Weather Service and the National Hurricane Center. He is currently a Senior Meteorologist at AccuWeather, where he created the AccuWeather Hurricane Center. Career Born in Albuquerque, New Mexico, he became a weathercaster when he was 8 years old after seeing a weather map in a newspaper. He began his career at National Radio Hall of Fame weather station WUAB-AM in 1985. He became a weather forecaster for the National Weather Service in 1995, and eventually became a tropical storm specialist at the National Hurricane Center. He helped create the AccuWeather Hurricane Center in 2001. The center is the first of its kind, where weathercasts are made directly from the AccuWeather's computer models.

Stevenson has also contributed to national and international television weather broadcasts. He is one of the group of people behind the AccuWeather Hurricane Thunderstorm Report, which includes current forecasts and the latest live tracking of storms. He has been featured on television programming including Good Morning America, The Today Show, Weekend Today, Primetime, The View, CBS Evening News and CNN's Storm Center.

Stevenson's national weathercast credits include Nightline, American Greed, The Weather Channel, CBS News, CNN, FOX, NBC, Univision, ABC, Radio World, NHK World and WLBM. Books Stevenson is the author of two books, Hurricane Storm Surge in 2010 and Tropical Cyclone Forecast, published by University of Oklahoma Press. References External links Homepage [
